

Acknowledgments

To claim authorship is to risk hubris because a book, like everything else in life, is a committee endeavor, a group accomplishment. I wish to express my heartfelt gratitude, therefore, to all who share with me this book's authorship.

I wish to extend special thanks to colleague and friend Deacon Bill Umphress for repeatedly urging me to write this book. Without that I would likely not have undertaken it. I am grateful as well to Bill Huebsch, an encouraging and discerning if strict task master, whose insistence during the book proposal stage honed my focus and set me on a happy course in spite of my attractions to the contrary. Many thanks to my folks, Mary Jean and Joe Arado, for hosting me during the writing.

Colleagues Tom Donlon and Mary Adrian provided consistent support throughout the writing process. Tom pushed me to find my voice and keep it. Mary nudged me to deeper perspective and creative breadth. How wonderful to have principals on your side! Bill Umphress's initial list of human resources topics and review of chapter nine buttressed my confidence. My good friend Jodi Auvin did me the great kindness of reviewing the whole text before submission. Her ear for language, eye for error, and gift for style helped me clarify what I really meant to write—thought I had written—in passages throughout the book. Our conversations were humbling and uplifting. Thank you to one and all.

Twenty-Third Publications has given me a great opportunity and most gracious gift by supporting this work and publishing it. I am very grateful to Deborah McCann, who edited the book, Dan Connors, Michelle Gerstel, and Dan Smart for their kindness, advice, patience, flexibility, and generosity throughout this project's completion.

In this silver jubilee year, I also wish to thank the best of colleagues I have known in ministry, as a layman and ordained, as a staff member and as pastor: Marian Walstrom, Gerry Keefe, Butch Rowan, John R. Roach, Roger Carroll, John Bauer, Paul Jaroszeski, Frank Fleming, Kevin McDonough, Bill McDonough, Mary Adrian, Dorothy Paulson, Anne Raiche, Dick Barrett, Bill Umphress, John Barrett, Michael Haley, Joy Biedrzycki, Kathleen Ryan-Huyen, and Tom Donlon. Without these wonderful men and women, who taught and formed me in ministry around the low table of pastoral leadership, and the many others who on staff and in council these past twenty-five years did the same, this work would never have come to birth. I am deeply grateful to God for them all.

Michael L. Papesh
The Western Slope of the Rocky Mountains
frmichaelpapesh@yahoo.com